THE absconding of LUM Asning; the shroff

of the Police Court, with large sums of money belonging to various parties, chiefly the Sikh Policemen and some of the Europeans in the Force, is suggestive of various points for consideration. Much as the circumstance is to be regretted, it cannot in fairness be held that the Government is to blame in the mat few have given vent to invective against the authorities for employing an untrustworthy man in such a position, but we must confess, taking the whole of the circumstances into consideration, the matter is really one in regard sibility upon any but those who have unfortunately been made victims. The fact of twenty-four per cent. per annum interest, which the enterprising Mr. Lum Ashing, who seems to have followed the policy of the celebrated Royal British Bank, offered, was too much to be resisted, and he made ready European constables, and of some outside persons who seem to have confided in him. Certainly the Europeans, and we cannot help believing also, the Sikhs, cannot for a moment have had any idea that the Government would pay them twenty-four per cent. interest, or that, in entrusting their money to Lum Ashing, they entrusted it otherwise than Regulations for the licensing and control of Gaming in to his individual keeping. Of course, to a certain extent, he obtained this credit by is hereby notified that all Rules, Regulations, and Con. ply at all. colour of his office. There is only one point at which some one or more of the Government authorities may possibly be open to blame; and we make no doubt that it will receive attention at Head-quarters. If it was known that manner, ordinary prudence would almost dictate the necessity either of putting a stop-to! timating that the Government was neither thoughtless men to entrust their cash to a

The Chronicle and Directory for 1872, the conclusion that in some way the Government are responsible for their losses. It is needless to point out how undesirable it would be that such an opinion should be formed; and, if possible, to do so without very serious loss to the Colony, it would be desirable that the losses should be made good. As suggested elsewhere, it might not be inappropriate to pay the amount of the defalcations out of the Special Fund; as if the principle be adopted that the Chinese are position for the removal of the Government to to have the main, if not the whole, benefit of the money, it may fairly be considered that the same argument will make it right to meet a disaster caused by a Chinese placed THE VARIOUS HOUSE FLAGS in a responsible public position from the same source. So far as we can judge, the public would be glad to see the matter met in some way; and we trust that the authorities will see fit to do so. Of course it will be only right that every man who makes a claim should be rigidly called upon to substantiate it. If he fail to do so, the most liberal Government can scarcely be expected to help him.

How far the same principle should be applied to the European Police who have lost money is, of course, another question. Possibly it may be considered that they are open to some consideration, and that if it be decided upon to give compensation, they should be considered entitled to share in it. But it would at all events be only right that they should be assisted to a less extent than the complainant out and beat him. During this Sikhs, as there is less excuse for their want .. . HALL & HOLTZ and KELLY of prudence. As regards outside people, of course the Government cannot be considered some Sikhs to take charge of the defendant he in any way called upon to make compensation, and in respect to this part of the matter, however much the losses are to be regretted, it would probably be not only uncalled for but unwise for the Government to make any return, as by so doing they would be encouraging the system of entrusting money to native Government employes on account of shop with a bundle. He followed him out, and their position, which cannot but be considered open to grave exception.

An interesting illustration of the use of Chinese police is given in to-days' police reports, from which it will be seen that two of these valuable defenders of the peace stood calmly by moncod on Monday morning at 10.05, and the last while a serious street riot was going on-no doubt being thoroughly intimidated by the bullies who set it on foot, or rather by the secret organisations to which individuals of this kind in China usually belong.
